

The Indivisible Self: An Evidence-Based Model of Wellness

CONTEXTS:

Local (safety)

Family
Neighborhood
Community

Institutional (policies & laws)

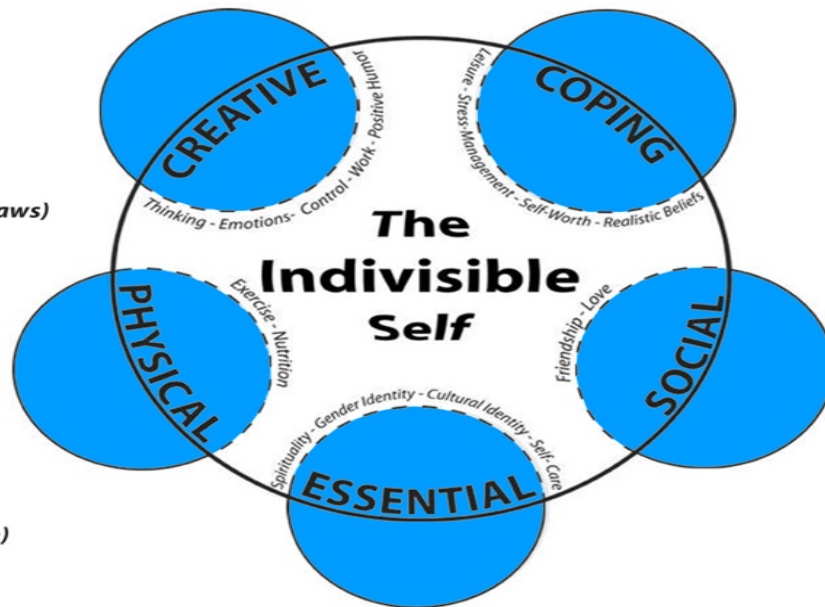

Education
Religion
Government
Business/Industry

Global (world events)

Politics
Culture
Global Events
Environment
Media

Chronometrical (lifespan)

Perpetual
Positive
Purposeful

© T. J. Sweeney & J. E. Myers, 2003.

Questions for Self-Reflection

True or False - My level of wellness now is the greatest it has ever been in my life.

True or False - There was a time in my life when I felt a greater sense of overall wellness than I do now. If the answer is “true”, when was that time? How was your life different than it is now? The time where my mental health was greater than it is now was when I was in high school. It was different because I had a social life, I was only working part time, and my focus was school.

Internal Dialogue - What are 1 – 2 wellness factors/components in my life that I would like to work on to improve my overall wellness? Physical wellness and eating habits.

Internal Dialogue - What are my personal strengths and limitations relative to the areas I have chosen to improve. My personal strength is feeling motivated when I see progress in the gym. A limitation I have is my eating habits and consistently eating healthy.

Getting Started: Creating a Wellness Plan ...

What are my Goal(s)? What will I do/how will I meet my goal(s)?

Exercise 3 times a week – set time aside from work and school.

Eating at home – meal prep at home to avoid the urge of eating out.

Do yoga and meditate – wake up and practice mindfulness and meditation.

Spend time with friends/socialize – make time on the weekends.

What resources do I have that will help me reach my goal(s)? Gym close to home and groceries.

What resources do I need to help me reach my goal(s)? A calendar, a workout buddy, and support.

How will I reward myself for achieving my goal(s)? buying a workout outfit for each 3 weeks of consistency.